Safety First

Pedestrian Safety

Four fatal mining accidents occurred recently when pedestrians were struck by large, heavy equipment. Immediately before the incident, each of the victims were standing or walking in areas where the equipment operators did not expect them to be. Always make sure equipment operators see you before entering any area where heavy equipment is being used. If possible, make eye contact with the equipment operator. It is recommended that all personnel who work after dark, or in any poorly lighted area, wear reflective clothing. Use of RADIOS to communicate would assist with these types of situations. Pedestrians should always communicate their position to equipment operators. Before entering an area you normally would not enter, let the equipment operator know you are there. When moving to a different area, inform the equipment operator before leaving the area.
